By now, I hope everyone reading this knows all about the amazing benefits of the CostShare Program and how it can help you offset the costs of promoting your products in overseas markets. There are so many different ways that the CostShare Program can help – just take a look at the “eligible expenses” listed in the CostShare Manual. If you’re sitting there scratching your head and wondering what all the CostShare Program hype is about, then start with this short introductory video before digging into all of the amazing resources on the SUSTA website.

The reason for this particular blog is to introduce you to a totally new way to use the CostShare Program: Customer Loyalty Program Promotions.

SUSTA can now support companies in the wood industry through the CostShare program. You might wonder, do sawmills promote their brands internationally? Or, would a wood flooring company market their products in a foreign country. The answers are yes and yes!

Similar to the food industry, there are major international trade shows for the wood industry – Vietnam Wood, Dubai Wood, Interzum (Cologne, Germany) and Interzum (Guangzhou, China) to name a few.

While SUSTA will not have a pavilion at the show, companies can exhibit and request 50% reimbursement of their trade show booth, travel (flight, lodging and a per diem for meals and incidentals) for two, a translator for the booth, brochures and promotional giveaway items.

We have also seen wood companies translate their websites and create B-to-C ads on social media (when it is a finished product, like flooring). Ads in international trade magazines are also a classic B-to-B marketing maneuver that the industry relies on. Have questions? Reach out directly to our CostShare Team: Costshare@susta.org

Are you working in a market chock full of wildly popular customer loyalty programs? Looking for a cost-effective way to grab consumers’ attention using a tool that retailers and customers alike both trust and love? Well, the CostShare Program can be used to reimburse you for 50% of the cost of an eligible customer loyalty program promotion!

Customer loyalty programs open up a whole range of options to communicate with new customers and boost sales among returning customers, including mobile app push notifications, digital flyers on apps/websites/blast emails, co-branded in-store point-of-sale materials, and so much more. Access to a customer loyalty program can provide your product with instant credibility and unmatched visibility, giving you a leg up over other products in your category. Retailers generally invest a lot of money in their loyalty programs to gain an edge over other retailers, and they’re always looking for new products that will make their loyalty program stand out. This type of promotion is a classic win-win-win for the retailer, the consumer, and you!

USDA began funding customer loyalty programs in 2020 to reach consumers in Canada, where U.S. trade groups pioneered reimbursable uses of the tool to introduce the Cosmic Crisp apple and entice consumers to squeeze fresh OJ in the morning. Some customer loyalty programs may have a flat price for listing a product as well as a per point / per reward price that gets added into the total cost of the promotion. Some exporters have negotiated in advance caps on the total value of customer loyalty points awarded to make sure the cost of the promotion doesn’t explode when products start flying off the shelf.

Utilizing the CostShare Program requires a lot of planning, forethought, and a little bit of paperwork. But while nothing in life is free, a 50% discount is usually too good a deal to pass up. Talk to your SUSTA friends about using the CostShare Program for the first time or about adding customer loyalty program promotions to your current CostShare Program plans.

Preparing for an In-Person Event

Have you re-emerged into social settings only to realize you forgot the art of small talk or how to gracefully leave a conversation? We are all a little rusty! As you prepare to return to in-person trade events, here are helpful reminders:

Do your homework.
• Research the culture of the trade activity destination. Acquaint your team with etiquette protocols, keeping in mind that some etiquette has changed due to COVID.
• Identify the market’s demographic and food trends. By getting to know the audience, you can see how your product fits within their palette.
• Find out if any product education is necessary.
• Connect with the country’s Agricultural Trade Offices for more in-depth, local information.

Make a plan.
• Set goals, and equip yourself and your team with the tools to meet buyers.
• Create a folder to keep important documents in one place (client meeting itineraries, important travel documents, event invitations/registrations, etc.) and be sure to make a copy for your home office as a backup.
• Plan to bring appropriate amounts of materials like business cards, brochures, one-pagers, sales stats, samples, portfolio books, etc. Think about getting them translated, as needed.

Think ahead.
• Double check event organizer and SUSTA resources.
• Determine if you need an interpreter, a sampler or both.
• Will you need refrigeration or electrical run to your area?
• Can you advertise in the trade show directory or in other event materials?
• Are one-on-one meetings offered? Are there any other events held in conjunction with the show such as market briefings or retail tours?
• Are the event costs reimbursable?

New CostShare Program Eligible Expense: Customer Loyalty Program Promotions

Before starting his post in Costa Rica, Evan Mangino spent four years as the FAS Attaché in Canada, where customer rewards programs are a key promotional strategy. Evan and his team worked FAS to add these promotions to the list of eligible activities in fall 2021.
The Definition of Small

SUSTA supports small businesses that want to promote their products internationally. People often ask us: What does “small” mean? The Small Business Administration (SBA) has a precise size standard table that indicates, by industry, what small means. The size standards define small businesses by maximum annual revenue (ranging from $1 million to over $40 million) or by employment (from 100 to over 1,500 employees) - depending on the business’ North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) Code.

For example, dog and cat food manufacturers (NAICS Code 311111) have a size standard limit of 1,000 employees. And, shellfish fishing operations (NAICS Code 114112) can have up to $6 million in average annual receipts.

By those standards, “small” does not mean tiny! So if you thought you were too big for SUSTA, you might want to double-check the SBA size standards table (sba.gov) or contact us: (504)568-5986.
